Prosodic analysis constitutes part - perhaps the most important part - of the theory of language which was developed by the late Prof. J.R. Firth and his colleagues at the University of London. An important principle of the prosodic approach is the distinction between structure and system.