The present article studies the format frequencies of Arabic vowels in "emphatic" and "emphatic" contexts. The data are formant frequencies of ten Jordanian Arabic vowels spoken in three different conditions: (i) vowels spoken in isolation, (ii) vowels spoken in isolated monosyllabic words, (iii) vowels spoken in a carrier phrase. Mean values of vowel formants were from the analysis.